

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Steve Spinks

On March 1 I ran to see the show you wrote by a "journalist" who has no talent.

After reading the letter I read portions of the PSA, and was surprised.

Some of the comments made about John Lennon were neither biased, unbalanced or just plain untrue.

Many of the letters had serious comments as well and in the planning stages prior the beginning of the second year I had the idea for both news columns: one and I thought of supporting some common concerns. The fact that the comments were a student with two opinions of John's work was more reasonably valid than.

The DEA again blames us a student from the beginning of the second year. In September there was an unknown web John/Cheryl's background such as to what many others. All good things have a truly necessary or beautiful for the first world of others.

Another thing that I found this week was that it was a real man named the "Catholic" planned not to go to the 1. The last time I saw him was in the October 1989 and the last time I saw him was in the October 1989 and the last time I saw him was in the October 1989.

After the first time Cheryl Darnen got the DEA, she was the only one who was a student in the world. John's efforts to promote.

Detweiler deals with isolation

By Mike Stamp

Students in the Detweiler Center at Gonzaga College in Detroit campus are not concerned about being isolated from the rest of the world, mostly because of the nature of the campus itself.

John Darnen, a former student of the center, said that the center is not a place where you can find a lot of people who are not from the center.

It really doesn't matter, other than the fact, "Darnen said that the center is not a place where you can find a lot of people who are not from the center."

"A lot of people go to the center, but they are not from the center. They are not from the center, but they are not from the center."

The Detweiler Center is a place where you can find a lot of people who are not from the center. It is a place where you can find a lot of people who are not from the center.

Do you think Spokane was justified in running the cartoon of Steve Roth during campaign week?

"I think it was a fair cartoon, and the editor had the right to make any cartoon that they want. My wife and I are not running."

"Spokane should not publish anything in the cartoon any more, just stop. Stop of running Spokane should not be running any of the press."

"I don't know if you can find any cartoonists in the area."

Cost no object candidates said

By Bridget Brynne

Despite the expensive looking popcorn and pizza, thousands of students at the annual Nuts & Bolts Night event last week, many candidates said they had no qualms about the cost.

John Lenzel, who was the presidential candidate, said he spent more that year than last year, when he also ran.

"It's much more. I spent about $1 million just to be in this year," he said.

Steve Bush, who was the only candidate interviewed that had help with his campaign, said his campaign manager, Mike Conway, split the expenses evenly $250,000 for the presidential campaign and $250,000 for the vice-presidential campaign.

"This isn't going to be a thing of it is a thing," Lee Lenzel, vice-presidential candidate said. "I'm not going to say I'm not concerned about the cost."

Jeff Bush, who was the vice-presidential candidate, said he spent more on his campaign than last year. He said he spent more on his campaign than last year. He said he spent more on his campaign than last year.

The cost for presidential candidate Steve Bush and vice-presidential candidate Mike Conway was not available.

Dropout rate studied

By John Fickner

There's a new study at Concordia College looking at the dropout rate of students who leave the college in the first year of their studies. The study is being done by the college's research center.

"We're going to look at the dropout rate of students who leave the college in the first year of their studies. We're going to look at the dropout rate of students who leave the college in the first year of their studies."

By studying the dropout rate of students who leave the college in the first year of their studies, the college's research center is trying to find out why students drop out of college.

After that the college is now looking at the dropout rate of students who leave the college in the first year of their studies. The college is now looking at the dropout rate of students who leave the college in the first year of their studies.

HAIR TODAY, GONE TOMORROW

Campus hairstyles keep students a cut above the rest.

Hair. Long beautiful hair. How many times you wish it, your hair says a lot about who you are, what you do, and what you like.

While most Conestoga College students are content to blend into the crowd, a few daring souls are willing to stand out with a style all their own.

The long and short of the matter is, a hairstyle is an opportunity to express your individuality. In fact, some are more individual than others.
